PLSC 2216 Genocide: The Politics of Hate, Fear, Terror and Power. (Formerly 216) This is a survey course on genocide, one of the most controversial and deadly concepts in all of contemporary politics.

We will learn how hate, fear, terror and power have repeatedly converged to produce the most deadly crime humanity has yet conceived. Genocide – against Armenians in Turkey, The Holocaust, Cambodia's Killing Fields, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Rwanda, Kosovo, and Darfur – has been a repeated policy used by murderous regimes of many types over the last 100 years. We will study these cases, and the general concept of genocide, in the context of basic themes from the Political Science fields of international relations, comparative politics, and foreign policy studies. No pre-existing knowledge of or exposure to any of these areas is assumed or necessary. 3 semester credit hour/s.

PLSC 2256 Political Parties and Organized Interests. This course aims to consider the origins and evolution of groups in U.S. politics, the presence and influence of interest groups and political parties in our contemporary politics - the ways they lobby, fund raise, campaign, and, more broadly, shape the political landscape, and what the future holds for parties, interests, and other groups. Prerequisite for PLSC 3356 only: PLSC 2000-level course. 3 semester credit hour/s.

Campus: LISLE (Typically Offered: Periodically)

PLSC 2257 Mass Media and Democracy. Democracy is predicated on the principle of open politics, which requires the transmission of quality information and an informed electorate. Mass media plays a critical role in informing the public and holding government in check, and also informing government about society's needs. The mass media environment is rapidly changing as a result of new forms of communication, technologies and globalization. This course aims to address these changes, and their implications for democracy, taking a broad, "landscape" look at the importance of traditional mass media, as well as contemporary, "new" media in democracy. Prerequisite for PLSC 3357 only: PLSC 2000-level course. 3 semester credit hour/s.

Campus: LISLE (Typically Offered: Periodically)

PLSC 2261 Belonging, Inclusion and Exclusion: Political Identities and the Politicization of Identity. The idea for this course emerged during the 2016 presidential election, as the phrase “identity politics” burst into popular lexicon while issues of race, religion, gender, nationality and class all played central roles in the campaign. Further, extreme partisanship, with labels of “tribalism” applied, became a greater cause of popular and media attention and concern. This course will explore the various notions of the concept of “identity”, the individual and collective identities people hold, and how these become politicized in both positive and negative ways. The course seeks to shed practical light on what can be an esoteric topic in academic literature, as the political significance of both the labels and groups is growing in ways alarming for democracy. 3 semester credit hour/s.

Campus: LISLE (Typically Offered: Periodically)

PLSC 2271 Appellate Advocacy: Brief Writing and Oral

Argument. SOCL 2000 Cultural Anthropology. (formerly ANTH 2200) This course is a survey course of the world's diversity of cultures. This diversity includes values, norms of behavior and, ultimately, the meaning of "human nature." By examining the wide range of cultures and cultural behavior we can learn that there are different ways of being human. Often, because our way of life seems so natural and "fits" us so well, we mistakenly assume that all people should be some sort of variation of what/who we as Americans are. But, as this course will demonstrate, there is tremendous variation yet commonality in the way humans solve problems, organize themselves and place meaning on life and the unknown.
